Organisational context

Pathways To Recovery is a private business in South Australia, designed to operate within the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS). We offer disability and mental health support services to NDIS participants, and to the general community. We were borne from a desire to bring the disability and mental health sectors together so that people can access the support they need to live where they would like to live.

Pathways To Recovery prides itself on being flexible and innovative. We use a recovery approach in our work with all participants, and respect that finding meaning in life is an individual process for each person. We believe that motivation comes from within, so we focus on developing strengths and values and working on the goals that the participants recognise as important to them, no matter how big or small.

Position Context

The NDIS is a person centred, social insurance scheme established to provide support for people who have a permanent, or likely to be permanent, disability for the whole of their lives. Its intent is to give individuals:

- Choice and Control in the delivery of supports and services
- Holistic person centred planning
- Tailored individual funding packages that move with you

Pathways To Recovery aims to support participants with a permanent disability to live the life they want to live. We support people with a range of primary diagnosis, including but not limited to; ASD (autism and aspergers syndrome); ABI (Acquired Brain Injury); Psychosocial Disability (severe and persistent mental ill-health); and dual disability (mental ill-health and another disability diagnosis). NDIS participants with an NDIS package are able to purchase reasonable and necessary supports, as decided in conjunction with their NDIS planner. NDIS packages are tailored to provide a range of services and interventions to address the participant's individual needs.

Pathways To Recovery provides support in participants' homes (outreach support) and in the community to support social participation and skill development. We also work with a range of housing providers to source appropriate share-housing for participants who need 24/7 support to live in the community.

Pathways To Recovery also offer a range of services to the general community, including group programs and in-home (outreach) support, available on a fee-for-service basis.

Position overview

The Community Support Worker (Share House Program) position is responsible for the delivery of direct supports to participants in accordance with their NDIS plan, in a Shared-Living Environment. Individually funded plans are based on the participant's goals and aspirations, now and for the future. It also covers their functional support needs for daily living and participation, the support they need to pursue their goals, and how the participant wants to manage their plan over time.

Community Support Workers will incorporate a client centred approach to provide a range of rehabilitation and supports to participants, tailored to meet their individually identified needs. Community Support Workers may employ a range of different supports including but not limited to direct support provision (including personal care), crisis management, developing participant capacity and resilience.

You will work with participants and their support networks (e.g. family/friends/carers/guardians as identified by them). You will also collaborate with a wider team of Disability and Mental Health Support Workers. You may be required to work within a range of locations, including but not limited to, participants' own homes, share-houses, and in the community.

Our Shared-living Environments are designed to maintain and develop the independence of all participants who are living there. Participants are encouraged to make the house their home, and are supported to complete tasks and explore what is meaningful to them. You will assist participants in the day-today running of the house, as well as support their participation in the community.

Period of employment

Casual (with view to Part-Time/Full-Time employment) – MUST BE AVAILABLE OVER A 24/7 ROSTER
